

September 15, 2026

Letter of Recommendation for Julia Tucker

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to recommend Julia, who spent this past summer with me as an intern at Artala, my interior architecture and design boutique firm in Seattle. In a relatively short time, Julia demonstrated the kind of character, instinct, and creative maturity that I believe will make her an exceptional interior architect.

From her first days in the studio, Julia showed a rare combination of curiosity and drive. She asked thoughtful questions, sought out opportunities to learn beyond what was asked of her, and approached every project — from schematic design reviews to site visits — with genuine enthusiasm and professionalism. She has an artistic sensibility paired with strong instincts, and she is deeply personable in a way that puts clients and colleagues immediately at ease.

One moment stands out in particular. Julia sat in on a client meeting where we were reviewing schematic designs together. Rather than simply observing, she engaged directly with the layouts, and over the course of the discussion she proposed an idea for the layout that the client responded to immediately — so much so that it was incorporated into the revised design. For an intern to contribute a concept that shapes an actual client outcome speaks to both her design instincts and her confidence in a live, high-stakes setting. It is not common, and it told me a great deal about her potential.

What struck me most about Julia is how deeply connected she is to the work — not just technically capable, but genuinely invested in understanding the "why" behind design decisions, in growing her craft, and in building real relationships with the people she works alongside. That combination of curiosity, artistry, and interpersonal warmth is, in my experience, exactly what distinguishes designers who go on to do meaningful, lasting work in this industry.

I recommend Julia without reservation and believe she has a bright future ahead in interior architecture and design. Please feel free to reach out if I can offer any further insight.

With gratitude,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Amy May".

Amy May

Founder, Creative Director & Interior Designer
ARTALA